Review of Parker's Lectures.

Mr. Editor: Being a careful reader of your paper, I have had my attention, for some time past, drawn to the Lectures of the Rev. Mr. PARKER, as reported by your Boston correspondent. I must say, however, that for the life of me I cannot tell what the Reverend gentleman would be aiming at. Every succeeding Lecture I expected would contain some definition of terms, some statement of principles, or at least something to give the reader a clear idea of what the author was so strenuously defending on the one hand, and assailing on the other. In this, however, I have been constantly disappointed, and the closing Discourse, published a few days ago, leaves me as much in the dark as ever. The most definite conclusion to which we can arrive is, that the Reverend gentleman is earnestly recommending something which he styles Religion, and with equal zeul attacking another thing which he terms Theology. But when we seek to know in what these two respectively consist,-wherein they differ,-what is the precise nature of each, and what is the cause of that irreconcilable opposition which is represented as existing between themon all these points we look in vain for the least particle of definite information. We are not told whether the Religion advocated be the Mahometan, the Braminical, the Christian, the Religion of Nature, or a mixture of them all. The term Christian, we admit, is occasionally used, but without any distinct specification of the sense in which this allmeaning word is intended to be taken: and apparently for no other purpose than as a genera term of excellence, highly popular at the present day; and, therefore, well adapted to the author's most liberal views. In respect to the other word he is equally indefinite. No one can determine whether he refers to the Greek Mythology, or to the Systeme de la Nature, or the Thirty-Nine Articles or the Saybrook platform.

A friend, to whom we communicated our difficulty, suggested that probably Mr. Parker intended by all this, "the Religion of the heart" as distinguished from the mere speculations of the un derstanding,-or a living, as opposed to a dead faith. This, it must be confessed, appeared a pleusible solution of the matter, yet the formidable objection still remained, that the lecturer seemed evidently impressed with the idea, and wished also to impress it upon his hearers, that the views set forth by him constituted some wonderful discovery o strange and transcendent truths until then unknown and which he was the chosen instrument to proclain to mankind. It seemed, therefore, impossible tha the distinction to which we have adverted could have been the one intended by the lecturer. Many reasons might be assigned for this. It is, in th first place, found every where throughout the Bible, and it would therefore seem that on such a subject he would have been more frequest in his allusions to, and more copious in his extracts from that volume which professes, on the authority of inspiration, to set forth the true nature of Religio and Christianity. In the second place, this dis tinction between the head and the heart, -between a living and a dead faith, has, from the time of Saint James down, been found in almost every world on Theology, and in almost every Evangelical Discourse from the Pulpit; -and in the third place, i has long been familiar to the humblest and mos illiterate professors of Christianity. It was but a few evenings since, I heard these views set forth in a Methodist Conference or Prayer Meeting-ex pressed, too, with far more power and distinctness than are to be found in the Lectures referred to A great many who talk much about the philosophy of Religion are, perhaps, not at all aware of the sublime truths which on such occasions may be heard from those plain people, who derive both their Religion and their Theology from the Bible. They would there hear language far more transcendental than that of Mr. Parker, because derived directly from that most transcendent of all books. They might hear them talk of "the witness of the Spirit"-of "Christ formed in the soul, the hope of glory"-of "the love of God shed abroad in the heart" as the governing prin ciple of all right action, -of the love of Christ a the bond of union in the Church, and the only source of all true love to Man-of the life of the soul derived from the Redeemer, as the branch derives its life from the vine-of Faith that works b Love, and of the utter hollowness of all Religiou speculation without this. They might hear, too certain strange declarations which are, perhaps far too transcendental for Mr. Parker's Theology about "wedding garments," and "robes of right eousness," and "being washed in blood," and "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sins of the world,"-interspersed, it is true, with certain wildly solemn songs about "Jordan's banks" and Canaan's happy shores," and occasionally with strange ejaculations of "Glory" and "Hallelujah,"-yet, amid it all, setting forth a philosophy far too sublime for many a Boston audience, and which Plato would have studied with rapt aston-

All this have I repeatedly listened to with the deepest emotion, and yet without the least surprise, because there are scores of places in our City, (if we would inquire for them,) in which i may be heard almost every evening in the week Transcendent as such views are, yet are they to be found in the common language of many a humble and illiterate person who never could boast an acquaintance with the writings of Channing or Parker. By the way, Mr. Editor, having lately become very much interested in some meetings of the kind to which I refer, and which I have attended as a sort of philosophical spectator, might I suggest the propriety of occasionally reporting some of their proceedings for your paper. might give variety, and I can assure you that in this way you might obtain matter equal in excellence and interest to any derived from Boston.

But to return to this distinction between Re ligion and Theology: whatever it may mean, I find it is becoming quite a favorite with a certain class of writers. It formed, as we are all aware, a favorite topic with the late Dr. Channing. The author of a recently published Sermon dwells very much on the same idea, and with as little attempt at definition or clearness of conception as Mr. Par ker. We find something of it in the writings of 'Bez' whom the author last named once repre sented, with true transcendental bathos, "as diving down after the image of God in Man." The same idea occasionally makes its appearance amid the indistinct yet many-colored vapors of the brain of Ralph Waldo Emerson. It is evidently fast settling down, from its transcendental hights, into the common mind, as appears from certain advice to the Clergy, to be more practical and to preach more about Science and good works, lately given in that luminary of the Penny-Press, The Sun; and I must say that I was much struck with the coincidence in finding something of a similar philosophical speculation about Religion and Morality in one of the letters of the late John C. Colt, written while in prison and published in The Tattler. That original thinker likewise believed in the spirit of the Bible as distinguished from its doctrines. He seemed very familiar with the "Boston notion" that "the Scriptures, although not themselves a revelation, but the work of fallible mes, did, nevertheless, in some transcendental way, contain a revelation,' He, too, was of the opinion with Jefferson, "that the instructions of Christ were interspersed with human fancies," and seemed to coincide wonderfully with Mr. Parker in the sentiments "that Religion is, and ever has been, an inseparable ingredient in Man's soul," and "that the Indian who thinks his Maker moves at times in the music of the bubbling waters, is as certain to be saved as he who repeats long prayers and listens to the music of organs."-(Vide Letter xviii.) Like most enemies of doctrinal Religion, he had a most exalted idea of the morality of the Bible, and especially of the Sermon on the Mount. No doubt there was a species of sincerity in this, but the fact reveals a wondrous trait in human nature. The man, with his hands yet red with the blood of a fellow being, could actually feel an abstract admiration of that searching precept which declares that the first emotion of hatred is murder. Yes, that holy Law which slew the Apostle when it revealed to him the secrets of his own heart, is the subject of sentimental eulogy by convicted murderers and transcendental lecturers. All Infidels have admired the Sermon on the Mount. Even Jefferson could patronise some parts of it, although in others, the founder of the modern Democracy coolly professed to differ from the Founder of Christianity. Some men have talked about the genius of Jesus Christ. Such, too, may affect mere admiration-yes, admiration unmixed with trembling awe, at that "twoedged sword which pierces even to the dividing asunder of the Soul and the Spirit, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart.' The man who can read the Sermon on the Mount without feeling that he is, in his natural state, a lost and utterly condemned sinner, knows less of the saysteries of his own heart than of the secrets of the centre of the earth.

Among all the strange things in the history of our strange fallen race, there is nothing more truly wonderful (for we have no doubt of its sincurity) than this abstract admiration of men for that which, when fully understood, sinks them in utter condemnation. Persons of the most abandoned characters will dwell upon the lips of the moralist-will applaud his invectives against theology, as though they had been the darling offspring of their own brains and hearts-and wil actually feel a glow of delight when they hear a description of "pure and undefiled religion" as contrasted with what they have been accustomed to include under the unmeaning term sectarianism. How common is it to find men of the worst lives, the sensual, the covetous, the ambitious, all joining in praise of practical, and in loud reprobation of what they are pleased to style doctrinal preaching. The hard-hearted and hard-fisted worldling loves to hear the preacher who will talk about visiting the fatherless and the widow in their afdiction." Nothing assails his conscience from this quarter, because he blindly feels himself fully competent to the discharge of this duty, and that t can be performed at any time, when the pressng wants of his soul may require it. The ambiious and dishonest aspirant after honors will be melted at a description of that humble religion of he heart, which is alone between man and his Maker-which never speaks of itself, or makes a loud profession before a gazing world, but is ever occupied in secret acts of goodness. Oh! he loves it, no doubt sincerely loves it; but why is not his conscience disturbed at the representation? Ah! there is the mystery which Mr. Parker's theology can never explain. Even the sensualist just reaking from the debauch will forget himself, and hang upon the lips of the transcendental moralist, as he expatiates upon the superiority of the piritual over the animal nature. Ah! this, he says, is divine philosophy. He riots in that intellectual pride which is the only feeling called out by the description, and which he mistakes for real goodness of heart. He experiences a warm glow of satisfaction at the thought of the Godlike yet within him, and will fancy that he feels something like true religious emotion when urged "to reverence and cultivate his own noble nature." These, in the language of Mr. Parker, "take to Religion naturally," and need not the way of the Cross. 'Like men beholding their faces in the glass," they go away pleased with themselves, and applauding the preacher as no bigot, but a sensible man who speaks just their own feelings. The depths of their nature have not been stirred. Conscience eleeps, as long as their ears are not vexed by those dogmatic doctrines of a soul-disturbing Theology, which, revealing their utter ruin, tells them of one who, being in the form of God," yet laid aside his Crown, came down to Earth, assumed their nature, and poured out his blood to save them from the penalty of that condemning Law, in respect to which they feel no higher emotion than ne vapid admiration of the sentimentalist. It is this alone which breaks up the fountains of the great deep of Human Nature, and reveals Man to simself. "Oh! that doctrine of blood."-we once neard a man exclaim,-"any thing but that;" and et it is the preaching of this doctrine which alone effectually disturbs the repose of the slumbering soul. The system of Theology which empraces it need sever fear the puny attacks which are often made upon it. It contains an element of power unknown to every scheme of spurious liberalism or false philosophy. The simple Methodist hymn— "Five bleeding wounds He bears, Received on Calvary"— has broken down more rebellious hearts than all the Sermons of Channing or all the Lectures of Emerson. Although doctrinal preaching may be hated, and those who decry it may at times draw admiring crowds, yet still there stands forth the great fact in the history of the Church,-a fact admitted by one who was no friend to the sentiments we have been advancing,-that in no places, and at no times, has there prevailed a purer morality, more good works, more "visiting of the widows and the fatherless," than when the great doctrine of Justification by Faith has been boldly preached; and at no times have life and manners been more dissolute than under the influence of that preaching which has the most to say about Morality, to the exclusion of what are styled the Doctrines of Grace. Let the moralising follower of Epictetus and Seneca explain the paradox in the best manner he can.

We would wish to say a few words more about this difference between Religion and Theology, which Mr. Parker leaves so undetermined. Since he has given us no definition, we will hazard one: Theology is the science of truths respecting the nature and government of God, and their bearing upon the destiny of Man. Religion is a feeling of the Soul in relation to those truths. Thus it might be expressed in the language of Common Sense, or of old-fashioned Christian Experience. But, to talk more transcendentally which, perhaps, is proper in a review of Mr. Parker,) all life implies a syntagma or organization. Spiritual, like physical life, must be the life of something, and as the organization without the life is dead, so the life, without some organzation or syntagma, of which it is the life, is non-

Religion, then, is the life, of which certain truths, clear and definite as facts, yet mysterious in their nature, constitute the system lived. Not that the truth originates the life,-that is the error of some who are just setting out in the road, to the end of which Mr. Parker has arrived, and would be analogous to the doctrine of those naturalists, who would regard physical life as the result of mere naterial organization.

You are respectfully requested, Mr. Editor, to rive this a place in your columns. The leading sen iments contained in it, I have no doubt, are those of a very large and very respectable class of your daily readers. They have unquestionably been assailed in the lectures of Mr. Parker. On no other ground would we seek their admission. We therefore appeal to your well known candor, and to that liberality by which you profess to be governed in the management of your widely circula-A TRANSCENDENTALIST.

son remarked that it had been the intention of the Court to sentence Samuel A. Suydam this morning, (convicted of an assault on Signor D.Aivear.) Affidavits, however, had been presented, and there appeared to be great contradiction in em, leaving in doubt the circumstances. A question however has arisen as to the power of the Court in mitiga tion. The law makes the offience to be against the nation to which the minister belongs. The penalty is 5 years in the State Prison, and fine, without limit, at the option of the Court. As Mr. Saydam is out on bail the Court wil take time to examine the law and the facts is the case, and call him up when it is prepared to pass sentence. [He is also indicted at the Sessions, and a civil action is hanging over him for the same offence.]

COMMON PLEAS .- William L. Simers vs. Nich'ls Saltus .- In the sping of 1840 the plaintiff let house No. 91 Cherry-street to John Shine, the defendant becom ing responsible for the rent. The property, at the time of letting, was under order of foreclosure. It was sold at auction in the fall, and bought by Patrick Gleason. Shine supposing he was not liable to the new landlord, ouit the premises. The present action is for rest subsequent to the time of Shine's leaving. The defence is that the surety was not liable after notice had been given by Gleason of his being the owner, and that the rents must be paid to him Verdict for plainuff $507 50, subject to the opinion of the Court on the point of law. William B. Jasobs vs. Barth. Blanco .- Action for dan ages in being thrown from a wagon which ran against a heap of rubbish opposite defendant's house in Dover-street, (alluded to on Tuesday.) The Jury could not agree and were discharged.

COURT OF SESSIONS .- Before the Recorder and

Judge Lynch. TRIAL FOR LIBEL.-Moses Blackstone was put upon trial or a libel on George Eger, contained in a letter directed to him on the 13th of last September by the accused, and which was written in language of the most low and vuigar style. Among other things states that his sisters were prestitutes, his brother the tenant of State Prison, his father worse than a murderer, &c., besides a quantity of personal For the defence a letter of a somewhat sin racter, written by the prosecutor to the accused, was produced as evidence and read. It appears the controversy grew out of a family difficulty. The Court charged that a letter issued by any one and delivered to the person addressed, if of a libelous character, was clearly a libel. Although no damage could be recovered in a civil suit only, it should be punished. The Jury returned a verdict of guilty, with a recommendation to mercy.

FORGERY IN THE SECOND DEGREE.-Mary Gibson alias Hennessy, was placed upon trial for passing an altered $5 bill of the Greenwich-street Bank. Verdict, not guilty. TRIAL FOR BURGLARY.-James Richardson alias John White and William Darroll, two boys, were tried for burgary. Verdict, not guilty.

RECOGNIZANCES FORFEITED .- James S. Schermerhorn, late Secretary of the Ocean Insurance Co., indicted for embezzling over one hundred thousand dollars of the money of that institution, also indicted for grand larceny, failing b appear, his recognizances were forfeited; as were also the recognizances of Henry R. Robinson for seiling obscure prints; Benjamin Sooy, for a violation of the Pilot Laws; Lycurgus Staples, for obtaining money by false pretences; and Charles Stone for grand larceny.

INDICTMENT FOR RAPE .- The Jrand Jury came into

Court, and among other indictments, presented one for rape, committed upon the person of Ann Murphy, at the Broadway Cottage on the night of the 3d inst, by Dingley, John Underwood and Gabriel Hatfield.

POLICE OFFICE .- ARSON, SACRILEGE AND GRAND LARCENY .- The French Roman Catholic Church in Canal-street, near Elm, was burglariously entered, on the 31st October last, and the following articles stelen therefrom : 2 candle bronzes, 1 silver sacrament, 1 silver oil vessel, 5 yards lace. 7 yards linen, valued altogether at $122 50. The church was likewise set on fire by the burglars near the pulpit, and discovered early on the following morning by the Sexton, and extinguished without doing much dam two men, one white and the other colored, with names of John Williams alias Moffatt and Benjamin Slater, both of whom have been in the State Prison previously. Had not the following day been All-Saints' day, and thereby bringing the Sexton early to the church, it would have resulted in the destruction of the building, as the altar, the staircase attached to the pulpit, and one of the pews were burning, as likewise a closet which had been filled with wood an

On the 24th of Oct. last, during the night, the office of Henry Eldred's livery stable was broken open and coats, a clock, &c. worth $21, stolen, the property of Eldred; as likewise other articles worth $10, belonging to persons named Scarf and Watoon. On the 4th of Nov. the jewelry store of Mr. Frederick Levy, No. 78 Bowery, was burglariously entered during the night, and a number of gold chains, rings, pins and other jewelry, of the value of $175, stolen. On the 12th of the same month, Mr. Jacob Rankan, No. 163 Grand-street, had a copper kettle stolen from his store, as also some tin kettles. These two men have doubtless been conserned in all these crines, and were fully committed to answer. A great quantity of stolen property was found in possession of the prisoners.

STEALING CLOTHING .- Cato Butler was arrested and committed for stealing from Elisba P. Barstow, of 59 Barcay-street, a pair of cloth pantaloens.

C. to this City an old and notorious counterfeiter by the name of James Ward. This man was arrested and indicted about three years since for forging a number of bills on the Seventh Ward Bank, and having obtained bail, which was sub sequently found to be utter y worthless, fled to Texas. He returned from there about six months since, and, having been discovered in Philadelphia, was arrested on a requisition from the Governor, and accordingly brought to this

SINGULAR CASE OF FORGERY AND FRAUD .- On the 2d of February last, a man by the name of Michael J. Sallenger met a youth in the street near Peck Slip, and handed him a bank book, purporting to be an account and a check on the Union Bank, drawn by Messrs. Ketchum & Alcott, or 12,409 62, to take them to Lexton & Palmer's, 62 Wallstreet, get the check cashed, take the moxey and book to the Fulton Bank, make a deposit in the name of C. W. Vorwerick, to whom the check was made payable, and return him the book at Peck Slip. The boy, instead of complying with the man's wishes, took the property in his possession to his employer, who, on being informed of the circumstan bes, went to Messrs. Ketchum & Alcott, and the check by hem was pronounced to be a lorgery. He then went to Mr. Vorwerick, who stated that he kept no account in the Fulton Bank, and that the book was likewise a forgery. Or going to look for the man, Sallenger, he was nowhere to bound. Yesterday, Mr. B. Osborne, one of the Police clerks ot information that this man was now in this city, and, i company with officers Stephens, Fallon and G. Hays, after diligent search, found him to-day in a lawyer's office Wall-street. Sallenger, when arrested, threw away a pock-et-book full of papers, containing deeds of property, con-veyances, &c., and which the lawyer claimed as as proper-Mr. Vorwerick also stated that Sailenger had but re cently come from the State Prison for similar transactions. He was committed to answer.

WORMS IN CHILDREN.—Of all diseases to which children are exposed, none are so fatal to them as Worms. Unfortunately, children are sel don free from them, and, as they initate the symptoms of almost every other complaint, they often produce alarming effects without being suspected. Worms are not only a cause of disease themselves, but by their irritation aggravate all other diseases, wandering from one part of the body to the other, winding themselves up into large balls and ob-structing the bowels, and frequently the throat, causing conulsions, and too often death. The desired remedy will be ound in Dr. JAYNE'S TONIC VERMIFUGE, which wil very soon destroy the Worms, and invigorate the powers of digestion so as to prevent a return of them.
